Why Jesus?

"Why isn't Jesus simply a wise man like Socrates? Or a prophet like Muhammad? Or enlightened like Buddha? How does one maintain the unprecedented certainty that this Jew condemned to death in an obscure province in the Son of God, of one being with the Father? This radical Christian claim has no parallel in any other religious belief. Saint Paul himself defined it as "a scandal and madness."

SAINT PAUL IS PROFOUNDLY AWARE THAT Christ is absolutely original and absolutely unique. If He were only a wise man like Sócrates, if He were "prophet" like Muhammad, if He were "enlightened" like Buddha, without any doubt He would not be what He is: He is one mediator between God and humanity. He is a mediator because he is both God and man. He holds within Himself the entire intimate world of divinity, the entire Mystery of the Trinity, and the mystery both temporal life and of immortality. He is true man. In Him the divine is not confused with the human. There remains something essentially divine.

Christ is unique! Unlike Muhammad, He does more than just promulgate principles of religious discipline to which all God's worshipers must conform. Christ is not simply a wise man as was Sócrates, whose free acceptance of death in the name of the truth nevertheless has a similarity with the sacrifice of the Cross. Less still is He similar to Buddah, with his denial of all that is created. Buddha is right when he does not see the possibility of human salvation in creation, but he is wrong when, for that reason, he denies that creation has any value for humanity. Christ does not do this, nor can He do this. He is the eternal witness to the Father and to the love that the Father has had for His creation from the beginning.

From the beginning Christ has been at the center of the faith and life of the Church, and also at the center of her teaching and theology. As for her teaching, it is necessary to go back to the entire first millennium, from the first Council of Nicaea to those of Ephesus and Chalcedon, and finally to the Second Council of Nicaea, which evolved out of the Councils that preceded it. All of the Councils from the first millennium revolve around the Mystery of the Holy Trinity, including the procession of the Holy Spirit, but at their roots, all are Christological. From the time Peter confessed, "You are the Messiah, the Son of the living God"(Mt 16:16), Christ has been at the center of the faith and life of Christians, at the center of their witness, which often led to the shedding of their blood. Despite some common aspects, Christ does not resemble Muhammad or Sócrates or Buddha. He is totally original and unique." (Pope John Paul II, Crossing the Threshold of Hope, pp.42-45)

Question: How does St. John Paul II's answer help you to understand Jesus's invitation: "Come to me, all you who labor and are burdened, and I will give you rest"?

The Practice of Being Present

In the article "The Practice of Being Present" the author Jeanne Schindler says being truly present with others and with God requires limiting digital distractions, especially smartphones, because constant screen use weakens our ability to pay attention and appreciate meaningful experiences. Using the example of a teenager ignoring a live performance while focused on her phone, the author explains that families can rebuild awareness and connection by spending intentional, device-free time together, particularly during meals. These moments encourage conversation, gratitude, and recognition of God's presence. Drawing on stories from Prince Caspian and The Silver Chair, the author emphasizes that just as the characters had to become quiet and attentive to hear Aslan's voice, people today need to reduce the noise around them and cultivate silence so they can listen to God, strengthen family relationships, and live out their purpose with greater focus and faith.
