Jesus and the Church

"At all times and in every race, anyone who fears God and does what is right has been acceptable to him. He has, however, willed to make men holy and save them, not as individuals without any bond or link between them, but rather to make them into a people who might acknowledge him and serve him in holiness. He therefore chose the Israelite race to be his own people and established a covenant with it. He gradually instructed these people.... All these things, however, happened as a preparation for and figure of that new and perfect covenant which was to be ratified in Christ . . . the New Covenant in his blood; he called together a race made up of Jews and Gentiles which would be one, not according to the flesh, but in the Spirit.

From the beginning, Jesus associated his disciples with his own life, revealed the mystery of the Kingdom to them, and gave them a share in his mission, joy, and sufferings. Jesus spoke of a still more intimate communion between him and those who would follow him: "Abide in me, and I in you.... I am the vine, you are the branches." and he proclaimed a mysterious and real communion between his own body and ours: "He who eats my flesh and drinks my blood abides in me, and I in him. When his visible presence was taken from them, Jesus did not leave his disciples orphans. He promised to remain with them until the end of time; he sent them his Spirit. As a result communion with Jesus has become, in a way, more intense: "By communicating his Spirit, Christ mystically constitutes as his body those brothers of his who are called together from every nation. The comparison of the Church with the body casts light on the intimate bond between Christ and his Church. Not only is she gathered around him; she is united in him, in his body. Three aspects of the Church as the Body of Christ are to be more specifically noted: the unity of all her members with each other as a result of their union with Christ; Christ as head of the Body; and the Church as bride of Christ.

"This is the sole Church of Christ, which in the Creed we profess to be one, holy, catholic and apostolic." These four characteristics, inseparably linked with each other, indicate essential features of the Church and her mission. The Church does not possess them of herself; it is Christ who, through the Holy Spirit, makes his Church one, holy, catholic, and apostolic, and it is he who calls her to realize each of these qualities. Only faith can recognize that the Church possesses these properties from her divine source. But their historical manifestations are signs that also speak clearly to human reason. As the First Vatican Council noted, the "Church herself, with her marvellous propagation, eminent holiness, and inexhaustible fruitfulness in everything good, her catholic unity and invincible stability, is a great and perpetual motive of credibility and an irrefutable witness of her divine mission" (Catechism of the Catholic Church, nn. 781, 787, 788, 789, 811, 812).

Question: What does this mean for you Jesus today's gospel affirmation: "And so I say to you, you are Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of the netherworld shall not prevail against it"?

Fr. Marco

Please pray for the Special Intentions of Pope Leo XIV to receive plenary indulgences August 2026:

For evangelization in the city

Let us pray that in large cities often marked by anonymity and loneliness we find new ways to proclaim the Gospel, discovering creative paths to build community.

Game Day Formation

In the article "Game Day Formation" the author Jason Godin main point is that watching sports as a family can be a valuable opportunity to build stronger relationships and teach children about faith and important values. He explains that families are often very busy with school, sports, lessons, and other activities, so watching a game together can provide a chance to slow down and spend meaningful time together. However, he emphasizes that sports should not become more important than family, faith, or attending Mass. Parents should show their children that their relationship with God and their family should come before entertainment.

The author also gives parents advice on how to use sports as a teaching opportunity. For example, parents can talk with their children about inappropriate advertisements or messages they see during games and help them understand why certain ideas may not agree with their family's beliefs. He also encourages parents to turn off a game when it is no longer enjoyable or when it is taking away from family time. Instead, families could go for a walk, play outside, or simply talk and spend time together. Overall, the author wants parents to use game day as a way to connect with their children, teach Catholic values, and remind them that family and faith should come before sports and entertainment.
